EASTER MONDAY ROUGH IN WARD

Police Kept on Jump While Negroes Were Holding Big Celebration.

With the passing of the Lenten season denizens of Jackson Ward yesterday and last night proceeded to observe Easter Monday in a becoming manner, and it taxed the police of the Second District in preserving some semblance of order. Throughout the day arrests for misdemeanors and felonies were made.

One of the most serious cutting affairs was when Carrie Green, colored, was stabbed. She was badly cut about both hands and wrists at her home, 512 West Duval Street. A coat which she wore was slashed from her back. It was necessary for Dr. H. T. Hawkins, City Hospital ambulance surgeon, to take fourteen stitches in her wounds. She accused her husband, Henry W. Green, of the attack, but he was not to be found when police responded to an emergency call. He was later arrested by Detective Atkinson, Bicycle Policeman Gerring and Patrolman Krohn.

Robert Crawford, a negro youth, was shot through his foot by Clarence Clark, also colored, who was playing with a revolver at St. Paul and Court Streets. Crawford was treated by Dr. Hawkins and removed to his home, 828 St. Paul Street. As it was apparent the shooting was accidental, there were no arrests.

Carlton Taylor, colored, of 125 West Hill Street, shortly after 9 o'clock ran into the City Hospital with a long gash in his back. After twelve stitches had been taken in it, he said that he had been stabbed by Haywood Livingston, also colored. The two, it was learned, had quarreled over a debt of a quarter.

In the Wake of the Game

By GUS MALBERT

With Charles Webb Murphy and Barney Dreyfuss tacking the "No booze here" sign to contracts; with taps being sounded when the candles of night first show themselves timidly through the gray of evening, and with other straight-laced "thou-shalt-not" propaganda going up on the call board day after day, the walkers of the straight-and-narrow in Swatland's doleful realm will hearken with joy at the nearby words of wisdom, nay, the choice morsels of a sort of superindividual who shouts that "beer is brain food for baseball men; coffee is positive poison. Beer furnishes pep and ginger and intuitive baseball sense; coffee stupefies, deadens and breeds slothfulness. Baseball players should be fed beer."

And this superindividual is an elder in the Presbyterian church, leader of the Baruch class, and a total abstainer, besides being manager of the baseball club in Dunellen, N. J. His name is Bob Bogardus, and he is successful both as a manager and as a business man. True, he has brought upon his head the ire of all the regular attendants at quilting parties and church societies, and has caused the clergy of his native city to raise hands in holy horror at his backsliding, but since Bob never looks upon the cup, can walk up to Bacchus and hand him a jolt in the jaw without receiving a counter attack, there is little the holier-than-thou brigade can do but rant. Bob is positive that he is right, and, being positive, will feed to the aspiring youngsters of his ball club all the holy juice that can comfortably carry. Which started Pegasus on the following wild ride:

Over in Jersey,
Where the crocus lends its colors,
Where mosquitoes grow like whales,
Where the corporations prosper,
Counting money out in sales,

Where the red flag floats in freedom,
Where commuters flock like birds,
Where Prex Wilson first found glory,
Pulling votes around in herds,

Where Hoboken greets the liners,
Where the alien lovers meet,
Where they sort out all the rabble,
Turning most into the street.

Where rewards are paid in hop juice,
Where the swatter gets his suds,
Where they build up pep on lager—
That's in Jersey; some country, Buds.

Benjamin Bancroft Johnson, czar of the American League, demi-czar of all leagues, has brought back the earned run, and brought it back with trimmings. He has issued orders that the official scorers in his league must again insert the earned run in the summaries, so that a proper record of the fallings of the fingers may be obtained. Any run, under the latest Johnsonian construction, will be an earned run that is scored through a base hit, or a sacrifice hit, or stolen bases, or wild pitches, or hit batsmen, or balks. Under the old regime, earned runs were only recorded when the man scoring was advanced through safe hits, stolen bases and sacrifice hits—balks, hit batsmen and wild pitches going in the battery error record. While it will put a little more work on the scorers there was never any good reason advanced for dropping the earned run, excepting that any team fortunate enough to score runs had earned them, regardless of how the men were advanced around the bases. It is hardly probable that scorers in the minor leagues will take kindly to the Johnson edict this season. It may come back in a year or two, but not now.

The Maxim silencer in baseball may be the next innovation. Hugh Jennings, probably the most voracious individual on the coaching lines in the game to-day, not forgetting that most excellent team of comedians, Mr. Nicholas Altrock and Mr. Germany Schaefer, now with Clark Griffith and the Nationals, is the exponent of the Maxim silencer theory. He expounds the opinion that should the silencer come into vogue, even the most pesterous of coaches could be made a negative quantity, the silencer absorbing all the noise made. But antics, such as Mr. Jennings and Mr. Altrock and Mr. Schaefer are wont to cut up can only be silenced with a muzzle and straightjacket, something that Hugh seems not to have taken into consideration.

Since Charles Webb Murphy is reported to have refused $35,000 and two ball players for Roger Bresnahan's services, the offer being made by a National League club, whose name Mr. Murphy refuses to make public, we agree with the sentiment expressed elsewhere that the only thing on earth Charles Webb Murphy would refuse $35,000 for is $35,000.01.

Our idea of nothing to do is to be cheer leader at a chess tournament.

That half Nelson in the skirts of the girls we noticed Easter during the parade may be effective draping, but the effect must be achieved at a rather abnormal cost to father's or hubby's purse. Such a waste of perfectly good material!

Charlie Shaffer is patting himself on the back because young Horace Milan, brother to Clyde, has reported. Horace has never played professional baseball, though he has had much experience in the semi-pro ranks. If he develops into the fielder his brother is, Shaffer has a valuable piece of property.

Mr. Pampelly, whose toe brought him fame during the football season, did a little able work yesterday in the Yale-Pennae game. He came to bat five times, swatted safely four of the five attempts, and stole just three bases, which shows that Mr. Pampelly is sort of ambidexterous, as it were, among athletic lines.

Out at the State Fair Grounds some of the men interested in racing are of the opinion that instead of removing by-products of the stables from the grounds, they were placed on the track, the meets would be better, for the reason that the course would be in better condition. This is something for the board of directors to consider.

GIVES HAPPINESS TO LITTLE GIRL

Chief Justice Goes to White House and Arranges Audiences for Her.

Washington, March 24.—Chief Justice White walked to the White House late to-day on an errand which surprised Secretary Tumulty and his office staff. The Chief Justice, who is an infrequent visitor at the executive offices, smilingly informed the secretary that he wanted to arrange an appointment with the President for a little girl whom he had met at the Capitol. The little girl had caught the eye of the Chief Justice as he came from the Supreme Court that what she wanted most to shake hands with the President of the United States. The Chief Justice said he would take her early and stopped at the White House on his way home, arranging for an audience to-morrow afternoon in the East room, where public receptions are held.

Statisticians will report to the Ways and Means Committee to-morrow an estimate of customs receipts to be collected under the proposed new tariff "duty." TARIFF DETAILS ARE DISCUSSED

President Wilson and Leader Underwood Hold Long Conference.

THEY ARE IN FULL ACCORD

Administrative Features and Income Tax Proving Hard to Solve.

Washington, March 24.—Following his announced policy of keeping in touch with tariff legislation, President Wilson conferred at length to-night with Chairman Underwood, of the Ways and Means Committee, on details of the tariff bills which have been prepared for submission to the Democratic caucus.

Underwood carried a draft of the revised tariff rates to the White House and explained them to the President. Members of the Ways and Means Committee understand that the President and Underwood are in accord on the tariff legislation, and whatever suggestions the President has made will be carried back by Underwood to his committee.

Solution Is Difficult.
The administrative features of both the general tariff law and of the income tax are proving difficult of solution by the committee. It has been held that the cost of collecting the customs duties has been excessive, and plans are under consideration for cutting down this expense. There is similar difficulty with proposed plans for collecting the income tax. While members of the committee would like to see the income tax collected as low as possible, it is realized that there is an exemption point where the cost of collection would make the tax unprofitable to the government.

Underwood worked to-day with Representative Hull, Tennessee, and A. Mitchell Palmer, Pennsylvania, over this feature of the income tax bill. "We did not expect the administrative features of the bill," Underwood said. "It is safe to say, however, that the bill will be decided upon and completed before April 7, when Congress is to meet in special session."

Mr. Underwood admitted that his committee had adopted a tentative income tax rate, but the final rate is to be determined after the committee has some definite information of the amount of customs duties to be lost by proposed reductions in the general tariff schedule. "The income tax is to be levied on the basis of the amount of customs duties to be lost by proposed reductions in the general tariff schedule. There may be no deficit in the national treasury at the end of the next fiscal year."

Will Report To-day.
Statisticians will report to the Ways and Means Committee to-morrow an estimate of customs receipts to be collected under the proposed new tariff "duty." Their report may show some falling off in receipts as to necessitating the raising of some of the duties which have met the heaviest cuts. It is not considered advisable by the Democratic leaders to impose too heavy an income tax, because of possible popular condemnation.

While Underwood conferred to-day with Secretary of War Garrison on tariff affecting the insular possessions, these duties will not have any bearing on the general tariff revision or on the customs receipts. There is practically no trade now with the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico, and a special reciprocal arrangement with Cuba. The insular tariffs are prepared usually by the Bureau of Insular Affairs, which is under the War Department.

The Easter dance at the German embassy was particularly beautiful, and the prettiest daughters were the centre of attraction. Miss Helen Woodrow Bunes, niece of the President, who is a permanent guest at the White House, accompanied the party. At the navy yard ball Mrs. Wilson was greeted by Mrs. Josephus Daniels, the secretary of the Navy, who was one of the hostesses and guests of honor.

EMBASSY HOUSES MAY BE PROVIDED

Leaders in Congress Are Anxious to Meet Wishes of President Wilson.

MARTIN APPROVES PLAN

Virginia Senator Says Something Must Be Done to Relieve Situation.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Washington, March 24.—Senator Gore talked with the President to-day about his failure to secure men of ability with sufficient means to enable them to accept diplomatic positions. The Senator suggested that perhaps Congress might be able to appropriate money to build embassies and legations and take away the chief expense with which this country's representatives abroad heretofore have been burdened. President displayed much interest in a possible solution of the question.

Besides the official announcement that Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, had declined the ambassadorship to Great Britain, there was no definite word at the White House as to probable diplomatic appointments. Secretary Tumulty declared that while the President had a number of men under consideration, only a few had been tentatively fixed upon for specific posts.

Rogers Is Appointed.
The only recess appointment thus far made was that of John H. Rogers to-day to become United States marshal for the Western district of Texas. Former Senator Gardner, of Maine, was a White House caller. He said that a week ago he had been offered the chairmanship of the port of Portland, Me., and that he would accept the appointment. White House officials, however, refused to confirm or deny this.

The President shook hands with the members of the Princeton baseball team, expressing regret that he could not attend their game with Georgetown to-day.

President Wilson's expressed wish that a movement be started in Congress to exact legislation to provide residences for American diplomats abroad meets with approval by those in authority at the Capitol. The United States to-day owns property only in Bangkok, Peking, Tokyo and Constantinople. That in Tokyo is so unsuitable that it cannot be occupied. In every other capital the diplomatic representative pays for his residence out of his held allowance with the government.

Something Must Be Done.
Senator Martin, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, said: "The next Congress will keep careful watch on expenditures, but in this matter something must be done. We shall make a start, at least, and begin the work of providing official residences so that men of ability but of moderate financial means will be able to accept these posts and serve their country."

Chairman Flood, of the House committee, is on record in more than one official report as favoring this plan. "I have always been in favor of doing that which the President now asks," said Mr. Flood. "We can begin the work modestly and each year appropriate enough to make commendable headway. This should have been done some time ago."

"In my opinion," said Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, "not only should an ambassador or minister be provided with a house duly appointed and furnished, but he should be required by law to reside in it, so that if a rich man should be appointed he could not rent a palace and set a price that his successor could not follow unless he were also a rich man."

Are You Busy? 75 Prizes to Be Won

Second Period is Now Starting—Every Day's Work Will Help You to Win.

How many people did you approach yesterday with a request for a subscription? If you failed to see every one whom you could reach we can predict that some other candidate made a better gain in votes than yourself. Don't let this happen again. Be yourself the candidate who makes the most gains to-day. That will help to balance the scales.

If you knew at any hour of the contest that two or three more subscriptions would certainly win you the prize of your choice, do you think you would sit down and quietly say, "Three subscriptions would assure me a prize worth thousands of dollars, but I'm not going after them." Wouldn't that be an odd line of talk for a candidate? There is not one of you who would not have those subscriptions safe in your receipt book before night.

This just shows what you could do if you were really determined to accomplish a certain amount.

Perhaps you think you are doing all you can, but when you put it to yourself as we have done, you will own that if three subscriptions meant the difference between winning and losing you would soon secure them.

A GOOD PLAN.

Whenever you feel that you have come to the end of your resources just pretend for a little while that the next three subscriptions will positively bring you out a winner.

It will be surprising how soon you can secure them if you really work as you would do under the supposed circumstances.

MORE THAN A GAME.

If you keep this up you will find it is a good deal more than a mere make-believe. It will do for you just exactly what you are pretending it will.

Keep right at it. Work for each subscription as if the whole success of your campaign depended upon that particular one, and in a short time the fancy will become a reality.

There are not a great many people capable of steady, sustained effort, and if you are among those fortunate ones who are capable of it, there will be no possibility of your missing your reward.

GET EXTENSIONS OF YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Any further payment of six months on a subscription of six months already turned in on the contest on which votes have been issued is an "Extension" of that subscription. The contestant turning in the second payment of six months will receive the number of votes constituting the difference between the scheduled number of votes issued on the first payment of six months and the scheduled number of votes allowed for one year at the time the first payment was made. Contestants are entitled to votes under this rule on "Extensions" of subscriptions, whether the former payment, or payments, were given to themselves or to other contestants. To insure proper credit on "Extensions," make a new subscription blank for the amount of money you are sending, and write on the subscription blank the length of the "Extension," as "Extended from six months to one year."

KEEP YOUR CAMPAIGN ACTIVE.

To-day, as you look back over what you have accomplished during the past week, are you satisfied? If so, then model the coming week upon the same lines.

If, however, you feel that there have been neglected opportunities, intervals of inactivity, then sit right down now and give yourself a serious talk.

You are in danger of losing your grip, and if you mean to win one of the splendid prizes you must take speedy measures to prevent such a catastrophe.

HOPE AHEAD.

Fortunately there is time ahead of you to remedy unsatisfactory conditions, never mind how dilatory you may have been.

As for the 75 prizes, you can win any one of them you work for—that is, if you work consistently.

Get into the right frame of mind, and then the good work will naturally follow.

If you want ideal advice, just look at what the wise and beloved R. L. Stevenson has said in one of his most wise and beautiful prayers:

"Let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely about OUR OWN business all this day. Bring us to our resting beds, weary and content."

There, you see, was even the frail poet's idea of happiness. To work and to accomplish, and to do it cheerfully.

ATTEND TO YOUR OWN CAMPAIGN.

He does not advise your going cheerfully about some one else's business. He probably agreed with us that the less you worry about what the other man is doing the better your own work will be.

So, if you hear of wonderful things that are being accomplished in the way of subscription getting by others, there are just two thoughts which you can properly bestow upon them.

First—The report is almost surely exaggerated. Second—If it be really true, you have the same opportunity to accomplish the same result.

The candidate who has secured more subscriptions than you has certainly asked more people for a subscription.

He has probably had more "turndowns," too, but he has gone on undiscouraged, asking every one whom he meets.

Why shouldn't you do this, too?

If you have reason to think that your methods so far have not been just right, start something on a different line.

You know our interests are exactly the same as yours. You want the votes which the subscriptions bring you. We want the subscriptions which bring in the money.

Anything we can do to help you to secure the subscriptions is something done for ourselves.

DECLARES KNOX HAS FACTS WRONG

New York, March 24.—Francisco Escobar, consul-general of Colombia at New York, has sent a long letter to former Secretary of State Knox, in which he dwells upon what he characterizes as "the very serious misstatements of facts" contained in the report which the secretary made on the subject of the relations between the United States and Colombia, and which was forwarded to Congress March 1 by President Taft. For example, he quotes from Mr. Knox as follows: "Within forty-eight hours from the proclamation of Panama independence the last vestige of Colombian authority on the Isthmus had disappeared, and the people of Panama, through the unanimous vote of their municipalities, had ratified the republic."

In reply Mr. Escobar says in part: "This is unqualifiedly false. Panama was recognized by the United States seventy-two hours after the fake rebellion, at a time when no election had been held, when she had no constitutional assembly, when the news of the so-called independence had not reached any of the populous towns of the interior."
